

other House. Unless some further reason were given,

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON had never said that any

He said the body of the people injured themselves, and the fault of the amendment was not theirs. He did not apply. His aim was to force the logic of the amendment on the people, and not to force it on this amendment. He agreed with the hon. gentleman that it might be better to leave the clause as it was. I had promised to introduce the amendment, and had been attacked because it was not introduced on the second reading. I had said I would not do it. But the hon. gentleman said why, if they were making any alteration in the law, they should draw the line at the date of the Act of 1878. He had considered the wishes of hon. members in what he had done. Though he was somewhat surprised at course taken, he should feel perfectly satisfied if the amendment were carried.

reference to the false declarations he had on the stand was made in a public statement of a Minister for Lands. He brought one or two matters under the notice of the Government, but little or no notice had been taken of these.

Mr. FLOOD never heard so much about false declarations before. It appeared to him that no scheme could be devised to prevent false declarations. He thought that he had stated that the free selector should within a certain time make improvements to the value of 20s. When it came to determine the value the number was determined by appraisal. Was the free selector to have a voice in it? It was an impossibility to determine his value.

Mr. MR. GILVIE was again referring to the question of the declarations, when Mr. SAMUEL rose to order, and said that the discussion with regard to declarations was not pertinent to the question before the committee.

After some debate, Sir GEORGE INNES said that it was not in order, considerable latitude had been allowed.

Mr. FIDDIGTON was not particularly enamoured with (Mr. Ogilvie) and the Vice-President of the Executive Council, and certainly not of the amendment proposed by the former hon. member, because it would have the effect of making the land law, which was already sufficiently complicated, more complicated still. By the land law of 1881, the tenant had the right of buying the land he occupied, and he was sorry that the original resolution proposed by the Vice-President of the Executive Council was ever altered in the way it was subsequently amended, extending the credit of the conditional purchase for an unlimited term. Out of the whole number of free sales

Mr. SAMUEL thought the remarks of the hon. member were not relevant to the question at issue.

The CHAIRMAN ruled that the hon. member was quite in order.

Mr. FRIDINGTON submitted that he merely wished to point out that the present form of paying up balances of pounds and shillings was a very inconvenient one.

Mr. G. H. COX altogether objected to the retroactive portion of the clause, because he believed that it would go further than was intended by the bill. The free-selection bodies in Riverina intended, immediately on the passing of the bill, to apply to the Government for a remission of the acre on their selections, on which improvements had been effected to the extent of 25s. per acre, and he could not see how the Government could refuse to refund that amount.

Sir JOHN HAY pointed out that in 1875 a Land Bill was passed, dealing in a precise and distinct manner with this question, and although it increased the amount of land that could be taken up, it at the same time maintained all the conditions of the former Act, and parties taking land were warned, as it were, that they would have to conform to the conditions of that Act in regard to improvements and otherwise; they were further warned that if they did not conform to the conditions of that Act, some of the improvements would be taken care of by the Government, and the Government would be asked as to whether the required improvements would be taken care of by the Government in the case of the land.

under discussion, simply because by assuming it they were virtually going back on legislation of so recent a period. On some respects it appeared to him that, so far as it was possible to hear, those selectors who had taken up the land previous to the passing of the Land Act of 1875 had rather more to complain of than those who had selected land at that time, because, as he had been informed, a considerable number of those selectors, through no fault of their own, but rather owing to the laziness of the Government, had been prevented from making good their rights to the land. If under the Act of 1861 persons had not been warned of the necessity of complying with the condition of making Improvements, as he was informed was the case, then thought they were more entitled to consideration than persons who took up land under the Act of 1875, and he was fully warned of the necessity of complying with the requirement of making the requisite improvement. He could not see his way to voting for the amendment.

ment should not ask, as it could be of no value. In the Act of 1875 no selector was obliged to commute his improvements until the survey was made, and this was not the case before. The date of these improvements was thus the time of survey, and consequently he had a longer time to make improvements. That was the reason he suggested the amendment. Persons who took up land under the Act of 1831 ought to have made their improvements, and it was told that there were no persons who could claim the benefit of this Act. If there were persons in the territory, they would be excluded. It was said by the President, they ought not to be excluded.

ST JOHN ROBERTSON said that he had acceded

Mr. HOLT suggested that the amendment should be withdrawn, as it was not desired by Sir John Roberts and the other Chamber disapproved of it.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON was willing to withdraw amendment.

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. OGILVIE moved after the words "repealed" the insertion of the words "from and after the," with view so to alter the clause as after words referred to mean it read, "from and after the passing of this Act."

shall be sufficient for all the purposes of the said Acts of this Act if improvements upon land conditionally purchased after the passing of this Act shall be of value of 10s. per acre, provided that the holder of the conditional purchase shall in lieu of the sum of 10s., pay annually, in terms of the 8th section of the Lands Act Amendment Act of 1875, pay at the times to the persons and subject to conditions and provisions prescribed by said section, the sum of 2s. annually in respect of each acre of such conditional purchase."

SIR JOHN ROBERTSON said that if they passed clause in this shape, the effect would be to place the Court

Mr. MARKS was prepared to accept that as the position had been reached by the Assembly as it occurred at the time of the vote, he would not object to its being passed.

MR. MARKS was prepared to accept that as the position had been reached by the Assembly as it occurred at the time of the vote, he would not object to its being passed.

to bring about a crisis he thought that they ought to be careful to guard their own privileges. They might well, he said, let this measure during the continuance of a war, but not then, if the people after a dissolution showed a disposition to hold the other Chamber, he did not think their place to be so weak. He objected to submit bill bad in principle, and so fair in its application. He did not think there should be any retrospective application of the principle of redress to the value improvements. He objected to the introduction of such a dangerous principle into legislation. He had heard it stated that certain hon. members in the House would benefit by the passing of the bill under discussion to the extent of thousands of pounds, and the statement had been made to him in such a manner as to make him inclined to think that it was true. (Disent.)

Though the principle involved in the clause before the House, if adopted, would not tend to the public benefit—(hear, hear)—and if the matter were left over until the next session, the Government would have an opportunity of passing an opinion upon the measure, he for one would not oppose its adoption if the country pronounced in favour of the bill.

Mr. WAIT could not see what was to be gained by adoption of the words proposed to be inserted in the clause. He thought that if the Government had done their duty the land question would have been settled long ago. He b-condemned in that House before, and I did so still, that selectors under the Land Act of 1861 were unjustly dealt with by the passing of the Land Amendment Act 1875. [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: Hear, hear.] And that reason he urged that there should be no limitation whatever in the provisions of the Act under discussion.

Mr. HOLT condemned as absurd the principle of improving upon the land selectors a condition of £1 per acre improvements on the land so taken up, and went on to say that the public obtained no credit, and that the selectors were not to be benefited by the improvements on land. The improvements he said the selectors should be required to make on their land was the improvement of their lives. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. STEWART said that, although a great deal had been urged against the bill by hon. members, he could see any real objection to the measure, and he suggested that the question should at once be put to the vote, for the sooner the bill was passed the better for the country.

Mr. OGILVIE maintained that no injustice was done the selectors under the Land Act of 1861 by the passing of the Act of 1874.

Mr. C. CAMPBELL thought before dealing with amendments they ought to have their eyes fully open to the effect and extent of it. It was absurd to commit persons

The meeting then resolved itself into a committee, for the purpose of revising the new rules, which were subsequently adopted.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of South Wales was held, in the society's rooms, George-street, yesterday morning.

The Hon. G. C. Cox occupied the chair, and the following gentlemen acted as stewards: Messrs. T. H. Edwards, M.L.A., W. Higgins, B. B. Woodhouse, A. T. Heleford, T. L. Peate, A. Bruce, E. Ridge, J. J. Alunworth, J. D. Jones, J. R. Williams, J. S. Claron, A. A. P. Dangar, James Gibson, and C. R. Bedwell.

THE CHAIRMAN laid the business before the meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the receipt of accounts from the members. The statement of affairs in the hands of those present. The statement of accounts was not quite complete, as the assets and liabilities were not yet ascertained. It was found, however, that there had been a considerable quantity of plant and furniture, and that they stood for 1879 a number of bronze and silver vessels for the medals and now arrived from the engraver, and which he had been ordered to construct, would be distributed shortly. He begged now to move the adoption of the report and balance sheet.

The meeting then resolved itself into a committee, for the purpose of revising the new rules, which were subsequently adopted.

came through, followed by Middlesex, and the p headed Elos at the distance, Lowlander finishing veaguely, and winning by a length and a half. Elos was third in length and time, and was followed by the two Valesia, Sir Holcomer, Earl, and Whalebone. The latter dropped dead some hundred yards from home. Time 3:30.00, 35 seconds.

PAIRING WALES STAKES.—Dexter I, Camoo 2, H form 3. Twelve started, and Dexter won easily.

EPSON HAZARD.—Volunteer I, Elos 2. Sunlight made all the running, and cantered home twenty length from Volunteer and Elos, the latter being beaten by a head and a half. Sunlight was followed by the rest, but was outwaded against Sunlight for going inside a post and the stewards, after hearing evidence, sustained the claim of Sunlight. The result was a surprise, and the opinion is that Sunlight can be required to share its prize to-morrow.

CRICKET.

THE AUSTRALIAN BRISKET. V. 15 OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—At this match, which is to commence on Saturday, the Australian Ground, is likely to prove a very good one. The ground is a very good one, and is very well provided since their arrival here, are in good form, and ought to show some splendid cricket. Mr. D. Gregory was entrusted with the task of selecting the local players, and the following are the names of the players: Allen, A. Bannerman, Bullen, Coates, Davis, Evans, Gray, D. Gregory, Geary, Moore, Maasie, Powell, Sherrin, and Tindall, with Clarendon 16th, and Whelan 17th. The match will be played on Saturday, the 17th, at 11.00, and will be a very interesting one. The batting and bowling talent; and Bullen, who is only second to Murdoch as a wicket-keeper, will probably prove a dangerous counter for the Kiwi to trifle with.

THE N. S. W. NATIONAL REGATTA.

The N. S. W. National Regatta to be held on Monday next promises to be one of the most successful ever witnessed in Port Jackson. From the diversity of races, and the large number of boats, it is expected that the sailing races will be completed for by yachts of the largest tonnage down to canoes covered boats only available in three classes. In the rowing races every class of boat will be used, from the ordinary rowing boat to the champion boat to the huge cutters in the men-o-war race. We would specially direct the attention of competitors to the fact that the rowing races will be held on Monday, and the sailing races will be started by the time fixed; this imperative refers to the length of the programme, and is only just to spectators, as few things create more interest than to see a race started by the time fixed. As a warning to rowers a bell will be rung from the starter's boat as a signal to take up positions. Any boat not appearing at the ringing of the bell will be declared from the race, and will not be allowed to start. The rowing races will be held on Monday, the 17th, at 11.00, and will be a very interesting one. Eight canoes covered boats having entered this race should cause some amusement, as it is not likely that they will be in the neighborhood of the rowing races, and will be sailed by rowers, many of these having built their own craft. Four men-o-war's ship will compete, and promises to be a well contested race. The rowing races will be held on Monday, the 17th, at 11.00, and will be a very interesting one. The committee will meet on Friday next, at 10.00, and will be a very interesting one.

the services of friendship which Russia did to Prussia in the wars of 1806 and 1810, will be done by Austria and Russia to each other. Austria and Russia will be able to rely on all dependence upon Russia, and however things go we need not anxiously to court the friendship of Russia. Germany will no more be in the position it was in 1870, in the question of the Ponto, to take on herself the obligations which may sooner or later befall it. The alliance is nevertheless a turning point in the history of Germany and Prussia. It is only calculated to let the Russian Government find the value of a good friendship between Germany and Austria. And therefore it also seems natural that immediately after the conclusion of the new Cabinet at St. Petersburg received the same information as the German Government, and be sorry to see that to-day their secret is known by everybody. The reason why in the beginning it was so difficult to keep is only that public opinion in France and Russia should not be suddenly excited. To-day Russia is no longer to be feared, as that which has now happened has shown. The Russian Government has no need. The newest work of the leading statesman of Germany appears, therefore, more and more in the light of a master-stroke of his policy in Russia. The Russian Ambassador has now become unimportant. The Russian Ambassador at the Court of St. Petersburg is the German Ambassador, and it is as impossible here as possible by the greatest mistake of the Russian Government, and by perfectly mistaking the importance of his personal relations with the Chancellor. When in Petersburg the opinion had been taken from that a more friendly approach to Germany was to be proved by facts. The first step was to be proved by facts. The first step stated that the Russian Government should no longer have to say the same old and deduced word in the upper leading of the Russian policy. The Prince is old, begins to be ailing, and is tired, and embittered. His counsels have lately all been in the direction of the removal of Prince Gortchakoff from Vienna have opened many people's eyes, and have shown them these disadvantages. The Prince is of a very great nature, will and of course not think of discharging an old and unproved servant; but in fact, Prince Gortchakoff is not a man of the kind where he will be personally harmful. In his place, Prince Gortchakoff will probably receive the leadership of the Russian foreign policy, and give it its direction. The next consequence is that Berlin will receive a new Russian Ambassador. The choice has fallen on one of the most important statesmen in Germany, who is making an important step forward in his career. When Mr. Schoubov stayed at Berlin for the last time, he pleased Bismarck immensely. The Chancellor dis-

The day of the departure of the Danish guest was the silver wedding day of Prince and Princess Frederic-Charlotte. The day was a household, and without festivity, only at half-past three their Majesties and the members of the Royal Family were invited to a déjeuner-dînatoire in the logs of Prince and Princess Frederic-Charles. In the morning the Prince and Princess received all the officials of their household, deputations of the Highnesses, and the members of the Household in Chief, deputations of different charitable societies, whose patroness the Princess is. &c., &c. Telegrams, letters, and presents, had already arrived the day before, and on the day of the silver wedding, from all the parts of the kingdom, and even from greater distances, though the weather was not very favourable. The Highnesses of the country had not been invited to the official part in the celebration of this great day, still the interest throughout the country has been most general and most hearty. The Prussian nation knows what she owes to the Prince, who, from his youth upwards, has distinguished himself by his services to his country, and his high position in the great work of the perfection of the army, and as a leader and Commander-in-Chief, has been one of the most active in the campaign against Denmark in 1864, in the Bohemian campaign in 1866, and again in the war of 1870, where he collected eternal laurels for the Emperor, for his gallant and successful leadership, and for his personal Fifth his august cousin, our Crown Prince, made General Field-Marshal, a dignity with which, according to former traditions, Prussian princes had so far been excluded. Twenty-five years ago the Prince married Princess Marie Anne, of Anhalt, one of the most beautiful and accomplished of the German princesses, whose marriage European princesses. Four children sprang from this marriage—three daughters, whose weddings have been duly reported by us in the course of the last years, and one son, Prince Leopold, who now about fourteen years old. The Princess, though a grandmother already, still the beauty of our Court, and the charming and benevolent make her beloved throughout the country.

Field-Marshal von Manteuffel, the new commander of Alsace-Lorraine, has presented to the Federal Council a proposal for a loan of 37,800,000 marks, out of which extraordinary expenses, which are not to be met by the ordinary revenue, are to be met. It should be made. The loan is to be at an interest of 4 per cent., and is likely to be granted, though it is not yet apparent whether the money is to be spent more for civil or for military purposes. Prince Bismarck has had the great joy to become the grandfather of a healthy little boy, Countess Bentzen, a only daughter of the Countess of Bentzen, born on November 26th, and the boy has received the name of his grandfather, Otto. May the new little citizen

THE GERMAN SQUADRON IN THE CHINESE SEAS.—The German Squadron, which, in view of the possible outbreak of war between the Chinese and Japanese has been dispatched to the waters of Eastern Asia, is, says the Cologne Gazette, often called an "ironed squadron." There are, however, no ironclads among these vessels. The ships are the Prinz Adalbert, Leipzig, and Vineta, and the gunboats Cris and Wolf are really iron vessels, well equipped, carrying a simply wooden ram. The only German iron-armed vessel on a foreign service is the Hansa, which has been sent to protect German interests in the war between Chile and Bolivia and Peru.

Also there has been a strike among the men who desire to be paid eight shillings a day instead of seven; and these are the men who were whiling away the other day that they were starving, and were not working for just enough to get them food and clothing. The Harbour Trust very properly refuse to accede to their demands, and are engaging other men to do the work; and, talking of the Trust, they are mentioning the cutting of the canal across Fisherman's Bay, so far as this can be done upon their own grounds, and have some of the work in progress, when a man

ARCHITECTS, BUILDERS, PAVING CON-TRACTORS, and PROPRIETORS of CITY PROPERTY, are hereby notified that the samples of "Baraka"
 Colonial Flagging and "Laid" White Portland Cement are on hand at the

the basement floor under the Eastern Towers.
This flagging is superior to any in use in the city, as has been ascertained by practical tests.
Arrangements have been made to forward large consignments regularly to Sydney per train, and the scale of prices will bear competition.
By the introduction of Eureka Flagging, the grievance complained of by the City Aldermen of being compelled to send large sums of money out of this colony for suitable flagging may be remedied.
